Welcome to the English Progress Course, don't worry it's not going to be that bad. In fact I hope you engage with the weekly/ termly challenges & it helps you understand in more depth – Blood Brothers.

Boxes like these mean you will have some questions to complete.

Have you read the book before?

What do you know or have heard about the book?

Throughout the course you will be set a range of activities, videos to watch & discuss etc. The more you put into the course the more you will get from it. This is the starting point to help you look & ask questions of yourself & maybe challenge your current understanding of the book. You may find some parts of the course challenging & may want to work on the activities independently & share one-to-one with your key worker at a later date. The course has been designed to allow you to adopt self-learning & question yourself & your ideas towards the text & characters within. This course can be completed independently but by engaging with your key Course Worker you will enhance your development & course experience.

“Hi, I will appear now & again & I will be setting key targets or tasks throughout. To challenge you so you get the most out of this course. Other students may hold different points of view to you, so discussions are encouraged to enhance thoughts & understanding. The initial worksheets are the starting point & though a skeleton template to the course, the sessions can be student led at times as you develop your ideas.
