Discuss the way in which Stevenson makes horrific chapter 4 on the murder of Sir Danvers Carew.

Thinking and structure of your essay

- Introduction: Give a simplified overview of the plot. Explain who Dr Jekyll is. Explain what his experiment was about and who Mr Hyde is.
- Explain how Mr Hyde is described, how Mr Hyde gets stronger and why you think this happens. Use phrases from the book. (pg 23, 30 & 65)
- Write about the incident when Hyde knocked down the little in girl in Chapter 1: Story of the Door (pg 11-12). What was unusual about this? What would normal people do?
- How does the opening prepare the reader for the murder of Sir Danvers Carew? Look at language – horror genre – full moon, fog, lone witness....
- Consider the maid's statement concerning the old gentlemen. Hint: Stevenson creates empathy for him.
- How does the murder affect the reader? Explore the impact on the reader – it is short but effective. How does the author make it sound horrific? Look closely at how Hyde is described like an animal.
- Consider the effect of use of colour and the weather. Hint: Pathetic fallacy
- Think about the emotions demonstrated by the policeman. Reflect on what this shows us about human nature - good and bad.
- How does the setting increase our sense of horror? Why did Stevenson put Hyde in Soho? Support your views with the text. Comment too on double lives/ shifting identities.
- What is significant about Hyde's disappearance? Summarise and comment on the chapter.
- Conclusion: How evil do you think Hyde is? What is your opinion of the novel and this chapter in particular?
